Duis Nursery caters to landscapers and garden centers and they pride themselves in the high-quality of their products. They grow a wide range of plants in order to provide their customers with many choices in their design applications. All of their plants are selected for their hardiness. They grow a selection of evergreens and flowering shrubs that will withstand even the harshest Virginia winters. And they specialize in those hollies and azaleas that have been especially bred for Zones 5 and 6. They are again growing hardy Camellias that will thrive in Piedmont Virginia if properly located in the landscape. Their trees are grown in "pot-in-pot" systems that allow them to harvest them 365 days a year with no transplant shock. And their perennials, grown in one gallon containers, are fully over-wintered in cold houses or outside and are ready for the landscape. If there are plants that you like that you do not see in the price list, let them know and perhaps they can begin to grow them.

Wagoner

Red Rooster Farm is owned and operated by Nicole & Marshall Wagoner, growers of specialty cut flowers and culinary herbs, and is located in Bedford County since 2004. Their half-acre flower field is organically fertilized and comprised of nearly 100 varieties of annuals and perennials. Fresh flowers are in bloom from late May through October, and are available to individuals via farmer's markets, local retailers, and direct farm sales. Commercial sale customers include area florists and restaurants. In addition to sales by stem and in bulk, Nicole creates wonderful bouquets and one-of-a-kind arrangements. New products in 2006 include unique dried flower arrangements, wreaths and swags, a greeting card line showcasing their exquisite fresh flowers on high-quality digital photographs, and framed prints. These products are available year-round. Treat yourself or that special recipient to the flowers from Red Rooster Farm. They are something to crow about!

Formerly a dairy farm Wipledale now has 5 greenhouses specializing in vegetable plants, perennials, bedding plants and nursery stock. All plants are home grown except for the perennials and nursery stock. Primarily a retail operation, the farm still has a connection to the dairy business as they raise replacement heifers for dairy farms in the region and care for about 170 heifers year round. You can see and learn about raising dairy heifers, tour the greenhouses and see the equipment used.
